

Taking the Lead Women in Leadership

Overview

We invite you to join us on our new leadership programme for aspiring women leaders navigating today's business landscape. Explore how you can become a catalyst for your own and your organisation's success.

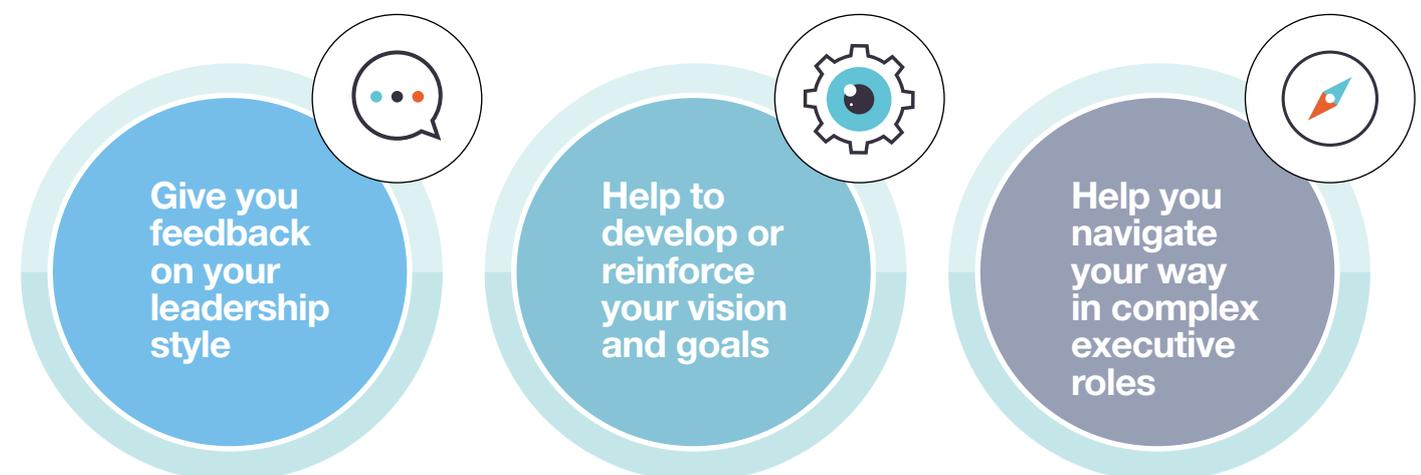

In February 2017, IMI and the 30% Club conducted a focus group with over 50 women in senior leadership roles in Ireland. Based on the insights from this focus group and other global research, Taking the Lead is designed to give women executives an opportunity to come together and share their leadership experiences in a learning environment that has direct relevance and personal impact.

Our aim is to enable women leaders to discover their authentic leadership identity: to refine their purpose, to invest their work and ambitions with meaning and learn tools and approaches to both navigate today's complex world of work and also become future-fit.

This programme will help you understand your strengths (sometimes underused, hidden or misplaced), your shadow (what might be sabotaging your best attempts) and your impact on others (not always what we intend). In the fast-changing 24/7-connected world this also means developing techniques and approaches that may be counter-intuitive: to go beyond natural survival instincts (of fight-flight-freeze) to be able to embrace change, work with both right and left brain attributes, and muster the courage to take risks in the face of the unknown.

This programme will give you the time and space to explore, develop and articulate who you want to be as a leader and the contribution you want to make to your work, your life, your organisation and the communities or markets you serve.

Drawing on work done between modules to identify and articulate a meaningful change for you and your organisation, the Blueprint is a practical roadmap for creating and sustaining personal and organisational change.

Emotional Intelligence Measure (EQi)

The EQi will give you a personal snapshot of how you manage your emotions, relationships, stress, decision-making, and your levels of optimism. # Underpinning Research: Gender Balance and Company Performance

Representation of women at boardroom level in Ireland stands at 13%, lagging far behind the United States (23.6% of S&P companies) and the United Kingdom (28.4% of FTSE 100 Companies).

Research shows that fewer women in the boardroom reduces intellectual debate and the type of workplace creative conflict that can lead to innovation. Homogeneous organisations produce less creative results and have inferior overall communication compared to companies with diverse and gender balanced teams.

Fortune 500 companies with the highest representation of women board directors outperformed those with the lowest, as measured by return on equity and return on sales (at 53% and 42%, respectively).

Women face a unique set of challenges when progressing into senior leadership positions, including unconscious bias, a scarcity of role models, and a peer group that continually shrinks the more senior they become. These challenges can make striving for the top a lonely and frustrating endeavour even in organisations with the best intentions to support their top female talent.

To begin to address these issues in Ireland, the IMI and the 30% Club conducted a focus group, with more than 50 women in senior leadership roles, talking about the inhibitors and accelerators that women face in reaching such roles. The findings have been captured in the infographic on the following pages.
